Another front liner of the celebrated “Patriotic Series” category of KHHI released to honor one of the most fearsome and respected soldiers the modern world has ever seen; the GURKHAS.

“Aayo Gurkhali” in native Nepalese means “Here come the Gurkhas”, the famous war cry of the Gurkhas. The legend says it all, the fearless Gurkhas used to charge upon their enemies screaming this rousing phrase in a typical Gurkhali style. It is believed to have been the enemies’ worst nightmare and comrades/battalion best possession/armor at the same time. The Aayo Gurkhali kukri is put on KHHI’s shelf to honor all Gurkhas who were and are in the front line risking their lives to protect freedom and humanity. Khukuri House Handicraft Industry proudly presents this khukuri to show its deep respect and gratitude to all those brave soldiers who gave their lives and willing to give their lives for a noble cause and a better tomorrow.

This kukri is basically made in the “World War” version issued to the Gurkhas in world war days however with an improvised finishing. The documented source and collections say that the World War version was widely used by Gurkhas towards the end of World War period. This khukuri is fairly curved thus effective hence favorite of many. The knife is slightly larger and more curved than the current kukri issued to Gurkhas. Steel pommel and but cap are fitted in a regular horn handle to give an over all dashing look.

The scabbard of this knife is made in army green colored leather to give a different look and also to camouflage the Kukri with the uniform and gears of the soldiers. The beautiful green scabbard of the Kukri brings more durability and can be a displayable item at the same time. A cross kukri insignia of the legendary Gurkhas is also mounted on frog of the khukuri, done to further give a typical “Gurkhali” look.

The blade is engraved with the phrase, “Aayo Gurkhali” and the famous “War Cry” insignia (logo) of the Gurkhas as a dedication to the brave soldiers and also to recall their famous war action.

This is a tribute to the war heroes who gave everything, even their lives in the line of duty. Their priceless devotion, loyalty, bravery and personality have earned them enormous respect, distinction and worldwide recognition. We will always remain grateful and gratified to these great people for giving us our identity and national pride. They are the true heroes of Nepal. This khukuri is a dedication to the Gurkha VCs by KHHI to mark its utmost admiration and deepest remembrance. “We salute you all”.

There are altogether 8 Gurkha VCs displayed in the blade on both sides. Each of them has their own valiant story and courageous military action

The names are given as follows; VC Rambahadur Limbu, VC Lachhiman Gurung, VC Gaje Ghale, VC Kulbir Thapa, VC Tulbahadur Pun, VC Agansing Rai, VC Ganju Lama and VC Thaman Gurung.

A famous “World War” version is picked for this noble purpose. Since the formation of 1st Gurkha Military unit back in early 19th century many kukri knives have come into limelight and countless legendary tales attached to it. The World War version is one of them and believed to have been used by British Gurkhas towards the end of 2nd world war period. The documented sources do not really point to the fact that it was issued then but because of its more effective size, shape and weight Gurkhas were individually found widely using the kukri during the war torn days.

In the hand of these fearless Gurkhas, World War became a formidable and often victorious knife that an opponent had to face against reluctantly. And thus the legend was born which continues to reign even today.

A perfect displayer to keep at home or office, to honor the war heroes who stood in the harm’s way, who gave their lives for others.

(The price also includes wooden display stand)

The historic and famous “World War 2” version which is also a very common and renowned kukri in local market and within the Gurkha society, which played a crucial role in making Gurkhas as one of the formidable soldiers of the modern era is now engraved with Regimental insignias (emblems) of the Brigade of Gurkhas to honor and remember these outstanding army units which served and are still serving the British Empire with utmost dedication, sincerity and extraordinary courage.

KHHI gives this kukri a unique look together with its beautiful shape, well balanced and effective body. This 11 inch long kukri’s already glorious image is boosted with the display of the regiments of the “Brigade of Gurkhas” in its blade done intentionally to pay tribute and to honor these distinguish and commendable Gurkha

Regiments and its fellow comrades, in memory of the old and new army units that served the British and the world to its best ability and highest capability.

One side of the “The Brigade of Gurkhas set” has new regiments and the other has old (disbanded) regiments displayed of the legendary “Brigade of Gurkhas” regiments of British Army. After India’s independence in 1947 mobilization for war-raised army units took place in which some of the Gurkha regiments (2nd, 6th, 7th and 10th) were integrated into the British Army under Britain flagship as the “Brigade of Gurkhas”. Since its simulation into the British Army the Brigade of Gurkhas has seen many changes in which QGS, QGE and QOGLR were raised to serve the army’s and government need. Later the four Gurkha infantry regiments 2nd, 6th, 7th and 10th were amalgamated to the RGR in 1994 in Hong Kong.

Unlike the regular World War, the scabbard carries a “Cross Kukri” badge fitted at the belt loop. The cross kukri symbol has been a unique and distinct Gurkha trademark and icon since its origin centuries back. The famous insignia symbolizes the brave Gurkhas. The Brigade of Gurkhas set also comes with a beautiful black colored foldable double wooden stand as shown in the picture.

“The Brigade of Gurkhas set” is for those who admire and appreciate the legendary units of the Brigade of Gurkhas of the British Army. A must displayer for all those true and loyal Gurkhas supporters and well wishers to pay tribute and to honor the commendable deeds of the brave Gurkhas from Nepal.
